

No Jobsite Safety May Land You Here!

But the real question is...where is here? A one-way ticket to a hospital emergency room? To an OSHA or attorney's office answering why your contractor didn't take care of worker safety?

The fact is, jobsite safety saves lives, and for you the owner, saves potentially thousands of dollars in project costs.

How does this save you money? When design-builder Michael Kinder & Sons has a low EMR (Experience Modification Rating), the premiums paid for worker's compensation are lowered significantly. An average firm will have an EMR of 1.00, which means they pay the published rate in the state they do business. An EMR lower than 1.00 receives a percentage deduction equal to the value less than the average number.

Through hard work and a true focus on safety, Michael Kinder & Sons' EMR is now at .69. This equates to a 31% reduction on our workman's compensation rates, which means a savings to you, the owner!

So how do we do this?

We are committed to eliminating all worker injury. Every MKS team member and every owner, subcontractor, supplier, architect and engineer can expect our work sites to place their personal safety as our highest priority. Regularly we receive awards for workplace safety from the Northern Indiana Building Contractor's Association.

As part of our zero-accident culture, we proactively work to avoid accidents and incidents. As a result, both the owner and MKS can enjoy problem-free projects and lower insurance costs.

A zero-accident culture, and lower building costs...the MKS approach to your next building project.
